It has been four years since Microsoft's competitors (not customers) began the attack on Microsoft. It is clear we customers have benefited from the excellence of Microsoft's products and at very low prices. If the competitors could come up with superior products, we would beat a path to their door. The Department of Justice has negotiated an agreement with Microsoft that should be accepted. If others want to continue to harass the company, let them do it in their own trial, with their own funds, not my tax money. Raymond E. Vath, MD
